

To divide and conquer the Slavic world, the West continues to attack the legacy of socialism in Eastern Europe.

Thus, we see why the West overthrew the legitimate, elected Ukrainian Gov. and has installed a fascist Junta. The Communist Party was outlawed and trade unions were attacked.

For much of the twentieth century, socialism brought prosperity and peaceful coexistence among the Slavic peoples, and now it is time once again for socialism to serve its role as a unifying force.

The Slavic Commission seeks to preserve the heritage of and continue the tradition of Slavic working peoples who struggled against imperialism, fascism, and capitalism.

Slavic workers, who have led the American Labor Movement for decades, have played a critical role in the creation of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO).

During the early 20th century, Slavic-Americans helped build the International Worker's Order (IWO), which organized a cultural identity, and a connection to the motherland.

Historically, Slavic people were instrumental in anti-fascist movements such as Josip Broz Tito, who led the Yugoslav Partisans against fascism. Also, Bulgarian Georgi Dimitrov was the father of the Popular Front strategy against fascism.

Slavic Peoples' histories, both foreign and domestic, have been an integral part of the Communist Movement.

Ideological problems arising from Perestroika proved to be detrimental for the world communist movement, especially for Slavs. CIA operations further complicated the situation, resulting in ideological revisionism.

Despite the eventual resulting setback of real socialism in Eastern Europe during the early 90s, there remains today a strong preference for a return to socialism. New generations of youth have begun to turn to socialism as a means of economic liberation from the pitfalls of capitalism.

Slavic Communist Parties today:
